

Let us, then, advance towards that higher civilization which demands pure air and wholesome water, not simply as a luxury to be enjoyed only on the cool mountain's sides, but as a necessity, to be enforced in city and village by stringent laws and requirements.